Occupational Therapy Changing Healthcare: Reaching Our Potential

Reaching Our Potential

Occupational therapy is moving toward its centennial year. We have a tremendous amount to celebrate, however we must continue to aspire to greater possibilities. The centennial vision statement says: “we envision that occupational therapy is a powerful, widely recognized, science-driven, and evidence-based profession with a globally connected and diverse workforce meeting society’s occupational needs.” Our theme for this year’s 2nd Marie Moore Lyles Symposium will promote this vision through recognition of our strengths, and our potential to advance more strategically to a diverse community with a variety of speakers who are making a difference and adding value to our dynamic profession of occupational therapy.

SYMPOSIUM OBJECTIVES

- 1. Understand our strategic direction that will guide occupational therapy into the 21st century.
- 2. Learn about current practice trends that are taking on national initiatives.
- 3. Articulate and identify a shared vision of the occupational therapy profession.
- 4. Generate discussion on our personal commitment to shape the future of occupational therapy.
